What is Going On in the Social World.

The last Army and Navy took place at Marini's yesterday evening, and the crush was so great that nearly half the guests were excluded from the german. But it was a most brilliant party, and assumed quite the features of a "valentine german," all sorts of dainty designs is lace, gold and timel being among the favors, and pretty verses done on tinted paper with floral designs. The hall was decorated with that good taste which seems intuitive in soldiers and sallors, the upper end being filled in with flowering shrubs, azalea bashes, orange and lemon trees, fern palms, and the richly colored plants of the isthmus, and the doorway guarded by a variety of Nature's green-clad sentries. Baskets of cut flowers depended from brackets, and the favors were massed in a pyramid, where gaily-colored ribbons, flowers and valentines contended for the victory of color. The guests were received by Madame Outrey, assisted by Miss West, both of whom were exquisite tollets, and the german was led by the young Senor Don Fernande Roca de Togores, who is said to be the most graceful dancer ever seen among us. The tollets were unusually elegant, and the variety of color, shoaling from vivid carmines and cardinals, up to apricot, and deeping from cream to royal purple, accounted here and there by whites and blacks in satin, muslin, surah, gauze, tulle and gros-grain, produced an effect very satisfying to the eye. There were but few inharmonious hues, and these were worn by such pretty girls that the offending gowns were forgiven. I think they were easthetic dresses, but, like Bunthorne, "I distinctly declare I do not like dirty greens and billious yellows."

Everybody in society was there, and no one prettier and sweeter than Mrs. Secretary Lincoln. The dancing was continued until 2 o'clock, and even then the young people who pursued pleasure with flying feet were loth to conclude their evening's enjoyment.

Mrs. Sawyer and her daughter, Mrs. White, are to give the german of which I spoke last week. They have chosen Monday night, instead of mardl gras, as at first intended. Their home is the Creswell mansion, the ball room of which is too well known to need mention, and the preparations for the party have been on a splendid scale.

Mrs. MacArthur has issued cards for a mardi gras kettledrum from 3 to 6.

A Smilling Newsdealer.

Mr. H. B. Polkinhorn, the well-known newsdealer on Louisiana avenue, near the Post-office, for some time past has been in the habit of getting down to his place of business rather late in the morning, very much to the disgust of his clerk. The reason Mr. Polkinhorn invariably gave the clerk for being late was that his watch had run down and he forgot to wind it. A poor excuse is better than none, we know, but in future Mr. Polkinhorn will have to find another excuse or another clerk, for yesterday he bought a can of coffee from the Importers' Tea Company, S19 Market Space, and found in the can a first-class chate-laine watch worth S18, a splendid time-keeper, and the clerk knows it. Suppose, reader, you step in and try your luck. S1 per can, 6 cans for $5, 12 cans for $10, 25 cans for $20, 65 cans for $30, No deviation in price. No less than 250 cans were yesterday sent out of the city either by express or mail, and every can, without exception, contained a present of from ten cents to $200 in money, orjewelry of some kind, such as dlamond car-drops, ringa, scarf-pins, gold or silver watches, besides many articles of silverware. Write or go in and buy a can of tea or coffee, or both, Address Importers' Tea Company, $19 Market Space, Washington, D. C.

The Webb Divorce Suit.

In the suit of Henry E. Webb, for divorce from Edith Allen Webb, on the grounds that she deserted him, May 27, ISSI, and is now an immate of a house of prostitution on Maryland avenue, also that she committed adultery with George Williams, at Reed's Hotel, in Baltimore, Md. Justice Hagner has refused the application for failure to comply with rule 93, which is to the effect that unless the petitioner duly charges that the adultery was committed without his consent, connivance, privity or procurement, and that after the discovery of the offense the petitioner has not voluntarily colabited with the defendant, the petition cannot be granted. It is presumed that an amendment will be made to the bill embracing these facts and complying with the rule.

Mr. George Scoville's Movements.

Mr. George Scoville will leave here tomorrow night for Chicago, and it is doubtrul when he will return. He has not his bill of exceptions ready, and it will not be filed prior to his departure. The delay is in consequence of the printed record not having been completed. The argument of Judge Porter was sent to him for revision, and the proofs have not yet been sent back. Until they are the balance of the printed record cannot be fulsished. Mr. Scoville is now of the opinion that he will prepare his bill of exceptions in Chicago and send it here, thereby saving himself an extra journey from home. He does not know now when he will file the bill, and cannot do so until the record is completed by the printer.

Messrs. Ingersoll and Cuppy, counsel for ex-Senator Christiancy in the divorce suit against his wife, have filed a motion in the cause asking the appointment of a special examiner to take further testimony in New York, in rebuttal of a certain portion of that put in by the defendant to the original bill. In behalf of Mrs. Christiancy a certain letter and receipt, purporting to have been written and signed by Edil Giro, were put in with other evidence. The complainant desires to take the depositions of Venturo Bargallo, Frederick Hemming, Jose Godoy and Calvin D. Hayward, all of whom are acquainted with Giro and his handwriting, to prove that the papers above referred to are forgeries deliberately perpotrated. They also ask that the testimony of Arthur Terry and G. Huss, LeB. Tuttle, of New York, and Harry H. Beadle, of Brocklyn, be taken for the purpose of showing that the reputation of Joseph I. Barnum for truth and veracity is bad, It will be remembered that the latter testified in behalf of Mrs. Christiancy and professed to give certain statements as having been made by Giro in his presence. They occupied an office in New York together and Barnum swore to occasions in which Giro boasted what he had done and what he would do with Mrs. Christiancy if she broke friendship with him; also that, while having returned her letters he could have her handwriting imitated, and would do it and compromise her. These statements, it is proposed to prove by rebuttal testimony, are false in every particular.

Yesterday morning E. Leech and Frank P. Gross, of the Mint.

Yesterday morning E. Leech and Frank P. Gross, of the Mint Bureau, walked into the store of the Importers' Tea Company, $19 Market Space, to purchase each of them a can of tea. Before entering the store Leech was heard to say: "If I could only find a nice chatelaine watch in the can I purchase how I would like it, and how it would please my wife," while Capt. Gross said a nice diamond searf-pin was the very thing of all others he would like. Both made their purchases, Leech buying the third can before he got anything very valuable, which, on opening, proved to be an elegant diamond searf-pin, worth at the least calculation $50, while Gross bought four cans, and in one of the four found a beautiful chatelaine watch worth $18. Both were immensely pleased with their "luck," but the "trouble" between them, referred to in the headline of this notice, is owing to the fact that Leech got the searf-pin, which Gross wanted, while Gross got a chatelaine watch that Leech shortly before said be wanted so much. Trouble Between Employes of the chatelaine watch that Leech shortly before said he wanted so much.

When our reporter last saw them they were trying to convince each other that there had been a mistake somewhere, but how or where or when neither seemed to know. Business is booming at the Importers' Tea Company's place of business, $19 Market Space. Hundreds of cans have been sold, and are sold daily. A great many orders are received by mail, and a large number of presents are sent out of the city every day, at the uniform price to one and all of $1 per can; 6 cans for $5, 12 cans for $20, 65 cans for $50, and a present, ranging from 10 cents up, either in money or jewelry, in every can. Step in and try your luck. Remember the number, $19 Market Space.

A list of the following named people liv-ing in the city or in towns or villages not a great distance away, who have received valuable presents within the past 48 hours, may prove interesting reading to the recipients as well as their friends.
